Devotee of Women's History Works to Create New Center

by Sandra A. Lange

Greenbelter Linda Shevitz was honored as one of Maryland's Top 100 Women in 2004 by the Maryland Daily Record. Shevitz was chosen for her accomplishments as coordinator of the Maryland Women's History Project, the only one of its kind in the nation. For over 20 years Shevitz has produced educational materials that describe the contributions of historical and contemporary women in all areas of Maryland society. The materials are distributed to community organizations, public schools and regional libraries throughout the state, reaching more than 800,000 students and 55,000 teachers.

Shevitz calls the Women's History Project the lasting legacy of her career with the Maryland State Department of Education, where she is employed as a senior educational equity specialist. The project evolved out of the Federal Title IX legislation passed in 1972 that mandated equitable opportunities for women in athletics and education.

Title IX broke down the barriers to women entering the fields of law and medicine as well as sports. Training courses on gender discrimination and sexual harassment resulted from the passage of Title IX. In 1997 Shevitz was thrilled to attend the 25th anniversary celebration of Title IX given at the White House by President Bill Clinton and First Lady Hillary Clinton.

The Women's History Project focuses on the contributions of women in the arts, sciences, education, healthcare, technology and commerce. "Women are the conveyors of culture," affirms Shevitz. "They are the backbone of volunteerism, of social, religious and cultural institutions." She feels it is vitally important for girls to have female role models and boys to value the contributions of women.

Shevitz is dismayed by the lack of coverage in history books of women, especially women of color. Other than Harriet Tubman, who led slaves to freedom over the Mason-Dixon line, Shevitz decries the general lack of knowledge of the contributions of women of color. She attributes this ignorance to the fact that men write most of the history books used in schools. She states that only in recent years have women's journals, diaries and even quilts been recognized as the historical equivalent of books typically written by men.

Shevitz has spent her career researching the lives of notable Maryland women. She developed a Maryland Women's Heritage Trail that follows the contributions made by women of diverse backgrounds. By visiting specific sites throughout Maryland, people learn about water women on the Eastern Shore, craftswomen of Western Maryland, civil rights activists of Baltimore and Central Maryland . . . scientists, artists, writers, educators, athletes, civic, business and religious leaders in every region and community. They learn about women such as Sadie Kneller Miller, the first female U.S. war correspondent, and Rachel Carson, who inspired the environmental movement.

1994 Outstanding Citizen Still Earning Accolades

by Virginia Beauchamp

Never say, "Never!"

So why was Mary Linstrom, Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen for 1994, who decided some years ago to give up flying and its discomforts and inconveniences, taking a trip this month all the way across the Atlantic Ocean to London? The answer to that question is a mother-son story of two recent recipients of honors and awards.

Now in her 85th year, Linstrom still earns accolades – the most recent one on March 25 as one of ten honorees of the Prince George's Volunteer Center at its annual Affair of the Heart dinner and celebration. The Center, as its dinner program proclaims, provides "the infrastructure" for 400 registered non-profit agencies in promoting mentoring, civic engagement and volunteering.

Then, slightly more than three months later, on July 7, son Christopher received his own special recognition through induction into the fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. An Associate Professor of Otolaryngology at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, Christopher Linstrom conducts modern procedures like cochlear implants.

Dr. Linstrom received his M.D. degree from Canada's McGill University, making him eligible for this prestigious award that is open only to graduates of institutions within the United Kingdom.

First begun during the reign of Henry VIII, the Royal College of Surgeons was reconstituted in 1843 with "of England" added to its name. Induction takes place in a historical structure belonging to the Royal College that was rebuilt following extensive bomb damage during World War II. Besides the ceremony, the day of the induction also includes a formal tea, a lecture and a banquet.

And of course the inductee's mother was especially invited. Despite her resolutions about long flights, who could turn down an invitation like that?

Award

Greenbelt already knew all about Mary Linstrom's volunteer work when she was named Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen of 1994. Some of her activities at that time, however, are no longer in the forefront of her present concerns. After years in the founding and then heading the board of the Greenbelt Museum, Linstrom now restricts her time there to an occasional tour for special groups.

Having worked for years with the Ladies of Charity of St. Hugh's Church (at one time as president) and with the Ladies of Charity of the archdiocese (as vice president), she now represents her church in the Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association.

Linstrom herself regards her work as volunteer social services coordinator for the City of Greenbelt as her most important service. Time and again she has helped families in the city avoid eviction and as long ago as 1984 founded the Interfaith Eviction Relief Fund. She also helped to establish the St. Hugh's program in support of So Others Might Eat.

With Linstrom's knowledge of special emergency funds and other resources, she has helped to provide food, clothing, temporary housing and other emergency assistance to needy families. It is for this work in particular that she was recognized by the Prince George's Volunteer Center.

Linstrom's nine children, who grew up in the three-bedroom GHI house in which she still lives, are now building their

Fail-Safe Voting Is the Goal

The June 10, 2004 News Review article, "The New Electronic Voting, Is It an Improvement?" omits many critical facts, which may not have been raised at the meeting on which the article reports.

Electronic voting machines can offer a huge improvement in accessibility of voting and in the ability of voters to avoid improperly entering their choices on the ballot. Another important advantage is that many electronic voting machines can be programmed to provide accurate and timely results for ranked choice voting methods, such as Instant Runoff Voting and Choice Voting.

The issue of concern is being able to provide a verifiable back-up system in the event a machine or several machines fail to operate properly or record properly. Much of the article was devoted to arguing against the need for a verifiable back-up system, most easily implemented with a receipt which each voter can examine and deposit as a paper record, as explained in the article.

In Fairfax County, a few alert voters noticed that the mark on the screen indicating their vote disappeared after a few seconds. County officials tested the machines and found that the votes did disappear and failed to be recorded about one percent of the time, about the same as the margin in the race for school board. However, no recount could be done because there was no paper receipt. Most voters whose vote failed to be counted probably did not notice and none of the procedures Prince George's County uses would protect against such a failure.

In a local Florida election containing only one race and no ballot questions, the final tally showed three percent of the ballots cast no votes for any candidate. In Indiana, machines in one precinct recorded over seven times more votes than the number of voters in the precinct! An even approximate recount was not possible.

Computer programming errors are a fact of life. Just ask Microsoft. Human error during installation and set-up also occurs.

The News Review article mentions the relatively high error rate for paper ballots, which results from ballots being incorrectly marked or being damaged or smudged. It does not mention that these types of errors would be greatly reduced in a voter-verified printed copy of an electronic vote.

For more information on verifiable voting, including links to many reports, visit the website for the Campaign for Verifiable Voting at www.truevotemd.org. It also contains actions to take if you don't trust Diebold and the State Board of Elections with ensuring the integrity of your vote. The goal is to keep electronic voting machines, which have many advantages, but to provide a fail-safe mechanism for when errors are noticed and for monitoring for errors that may have gone unnoticed.

Greenbelt Major League Champs

by Greg Fisanich

The American League champion Giants are the 2004 Greenbelt Baseball Major League champions. The Giants defeated the National League champion Cardinals two games to none. Game #1 was a 15-3 tough game with most of the Giants' players getting plenty of hits. Jacob Silver pitched a strong six innings and had great defense to back him up.

Game #2 started off again for the Giants, who roughed up the Cardinals' pitching for a second game in a row in a 15-4 blow out. This game was another greatly pitched game by Jacob Beckleman but again the Giants' defense shut down the Cardinals.

Baha'i Faith

"Could these fevers in the world of the mind, these fires of war and hate, of resentment and malice among the nations, this aggression of peoples against peoples, which have destroyed the tranquility of the whole world ever be made to abate, except through the living waters of the teachings of God? No, never!"

Curves Opened July 12 In Roosevelt Center

by Marat Moore

It doesn't look much like a bank anymore. Bright lavender walls and sleek circuit-training machines have replaced the tellers' windows and the bank manager's office now is a stretching and cooldown area.

On July 12, new life came to the former Bank of America branch office in Roosevelt Center with the grand opening of Curves, a franchise fitness center that offers 30-minute high-intensity workouts designed for women.

"We've had a very positive response – the mayor signed up today," said Beverly Palau, who operates the franchise along with partners and neighbors Cindy Murray and Gwen Mullins. Palau and Murray, known to many for their work as city employees, recently returned from a week-long

"Curves Camp" training in Waco, Texas, which drew more than 550 trainees from around the world. "We had a great time learning about exercise physiology, the diet plan and the hydraulic-resistant machines," Palau said. She added that people of any age can work out safely and effectively on the machines and that staff monitor all workouts and can design individualized fitness programs.

With a staff of seven, most of whom are Greenbelters, Curves will be open Mondays through Fridays from 7 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. until noon. The first 100 members will receive a 66 percent discount off their Curves membership fee.

Sermon: "End of the Religious"

Did you know?

Islam is considered by its followers as a way of life rather than just a religion as it gives guidance in every aspect of human life.

"O you who believe! Let not a group scoff at another group; it may be that the latter are better than the former. Nor let (some) women laugh at others; it may be that the latter are better than the former. Nor defame nor be sarcastic of each other, nor call each other by offensive nicknames. How bad it is to insult one's brother after having Faith. And whosoever does not repent, then such are indeed wrongdoers."

Knights of Columbus Awards for 2003-2004

by Agnes Conaty

The St. Hugh's Council of the Knights of Columbus celebrated their 12th Charter Night at St. Hugh's Grenoble Hall on May 8 after the 5 p.m. Holy Mass.

St. Hugh's Council 10885 was formed on May 6, 1992, through the efforts of Father Thomas Crowley, pastor of St. Hugh's Church and Maryland state and district officers of the Knights of Columbus.

Every Charter Night, the council selects the Catholic Teacher of the Year, the Police Officer of the Year and the Fire Fighter & Emergency Medical Technician of the Year. The Grand Knight also honors the Knight of the Year and the Family of the Year.

2003-2004 Grand Knight Sean Bailey announced this year's awardees after a potluck dinner. The 2003-2004 Catholic Teacher of the Year was awarded to Lois Barron, assistant principal and teacher at St. Hugh's School.

For exemplary service beyond the call of duty, the 2003-2004 Police Officer of the Year award was given to Police Officer First Class Marvin Marks of the Greenbelt Police Department and the 2003-2004 Fire Fighter & Emergency Medical Technician of the Year award was given to the West Lanham Hill Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad.

The 2003-2004 Knight of the Year award recipient was Austin Conaty, 2003-2004 chancellor of the Council. Conaty was also the 2001-2002 Knight of the Year.

The 2003-2004 Family of the Year award was given to the family of Matthew and Deborah Thompson.

women listed – Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, who is honored with a memorial tree for her support of the town in its early days, and Lenore Thomas, who sculpted the friezes on the side of the Community Center and the Mother and Child Statue in the Roosevelt Mall.

Heritage Center

Another of Shevitz’s special projects is the establishment of the Maryland Women’s Heritage Center, the first state center of its kind in the nation. Its mission is to celebrate the contributions and lives of Maryland women with exhibits, an interactive learning center, a resource and reference library, a women’s history archive, performances and seminars. The center, an outgrowth of the Women’s History Project, is a collaborative venture between the Maryland Commission for Women and the Maryland State Department of Education. First Lady Kendel Ehrlich and State Superintendent of Schools Dr. Nancy Grasmick are now spearheading the fundraising efforts to renovate an historic building in Baltimore where the center will be located. The center is slated to open in 2006.

Shevitz lives in Greenbelt East with her husband Steve. Their grown daughter Beth is a teacher in Montgomery County. Shevitz is proud of her challenging career in education and is a passionate advocate for equity, civil rights and social justice. She cares deeply about educating young people about the contributions of Maryland women.

Just as she honors women throughout history who have made a tremendous impact on humanity, she too is laying the foundation for future educators by her dedication to the cause she champions.

This 70-minute video tour covers over 100 historic, scenic and cultural sites on both the north and the south islands. Visit bustling Auckland, known as “the City of Sails” and Wellington, the capital, located on a magnificent harbor reminiscent of San Francisco. See Rotura, a land of geysers and boiling mud pools, Christchurch, Dunedin and Hawkes Bay. Wonder at the beauty of Tongariro and Fiordland National parks and the majesty of Mt. Cook towering 12,000 feet over the South Island. For unparalleled scenery there are Milford Sound, Mitre Peak and Bowen Falls.

This video is one of the Explorations Unlimited travel videos being shown this summer, every Friday beginning at 1 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. All videos will be shown in the senior lounge. Everyone is welcome to attend. Call 301-397-2208 for more information.

Three Greenbelters Honored by County

“An Affair of the Heart,” a Prince George’s County program honoring volunteers, was held March 25 at Martin’s Crosswinds. Among the 2004 honorees were Greenbelt’s own Mary Linstrom, Chris Fleshman and ‘Dem Raider Boyz.

Mary Linstrom became a community activist after graduating from college in 1980 and after raising nine children. Linstrom is one of the founding members of the Greenbelt Museum Committee and one of the first board members of the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center. In 1986 she founded the Interfaith Eviction Relief Fund and the So Others Might Eat programs at St. Hugh’s Church, where she has been a member of the Ladies of Charity for over 30 years. For the City of Greenbelt, Linstrom has served as volunteer social services coordinator since 1993.

Chris Fleshman has spent the past 21 years protecting the citizens of Greenbelt and their homes from fires. Fleshman became a member of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department in 1983. Over the years Fleshman has received the President’s Award, the Chief’s Award for service above and beyond the call of duty and Toy Runner of the Year for three different years. Fleshman is the vice president of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department.

‘Dem Raider Boyz, the members of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Step Team, are role models and mentors and friends for the students at Glenarden Woods Elementary School, performing at the PTA and school spaghetti dinners, as well as assemblies. Their spirit goes beyond performances and physical assistance. They have helped set up the Glenarden Woods Elementary school Step Team, and spend time talking with the students about homework, discipline and how to ace a test.

Nine stolen vehicles were recovered, one by Greenbelt police, six by Prince George’s County police and two by the vehicle owners. No arrests were made in the recoveries.
Vandalisms to, thefts from or attempted thefts from vehicles were reported in the following areas: Beltway Plaza Mall, 9100 block Springhill Lane, 9100 block Edmonston Court, 5900 block Cherrywood Terrace, 7900 block Mandan Road and 7200 block Hanover Parkway.

Altercation at Springhill Lake Results in Fatality

On Sunday, July 11 at approximately 12:54 a.m., police responded to a report of shots fired in the area of Edmonston Court and Edmonston Terrace. Upon arriving on the scene, police located the body of 20-year-old Carlton Anthony Sharpe of the 6200 block of Breezewood Drive, who died from apparent gunshot wounds. Investigation revealed that the incident started at a party in the 9100 block of Edmonston Road. Later Sharpe was talking to a friend in front of an apartment building when they were approached by several men who began arguing with the two. The suspects then began to assault Sharpe and his friend. The friend heard several gunshots, fled the scene on foot and called police.

The suspects left the scene in a black SUV. There are no definitive descriptions at this time for the suspects. Investigation is continuing.

Park Police Seek Volunteer “Ears”

The Park Police Volunteer Association (PPVA) is in need of volunteers dedicated to the service of the park police and the Prince George’s County community.
Volunteer services include: walk or bike ride the many trails in the county to extend the “eyes and ears” of the park police. PPVA provides fingerprinting of citizens and children at headquarters and many community events and assists with traffic and crowd control at festivals. From the Park Police booth volunteers hand out brochures and talk with the public about the services and programs of the park police, help in writing grants for funds to further the operation of the department. PPVA assists battered women with cell phones that have been programmed for 911 use only and provide clerical help to the Park Police at headquarters. For information call 301-429-5623, voice mail 601 or visit <http://ppva.net>.

Fire Dept. Promised Two Career Firemen

Brian T. Rudy, fire chief of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Inc., has informed the city that Prince George’s County will provide two career personnel for the 3 to 5 p.m. shift beginning on July 12.
Rudy is hopeful that this arrangement will continue for an extended period of time.
This change followed a June 22 letter from the Four Cities Coalition (Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights, College Park, and New Carrollton) to Ronald Blackwell, the county’s fire chief, referencing the career staff losses at various fire stations throughout the county.
“Providing our services to the citizens of Greenbelt is paramount,” Rudy said. “Without staffing we are unable to perform our vital tasks.”

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

The Department is offering a reward of up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter. Citizens may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 301-507-6522.

Drunk Drivers Are Targeted for Law Enforcement Crack-Down

Weekly sobriety checkpoints and newly deployed technology that measures the presence of alcohol without a driver’s “active participation” are but two of the obstacles awaiting drunk drivers in Maryland, state law enforcement officials have announced.
Maryland state and local law enforcement officers have launched Maryland’s third annual Checkpoint Strikeforce campaign – a highly-visible, zero tolerance law enforcement effort to identify and arrest drunk drivers throughout the state over the next 26 weeks.
Supported by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), Maryland’s Checkpoint Strikeforce campaign is part of a larger effort involving five mid-Atlantic states plus the District of Columbia. The operation serves as a landmark, state-wide law enforcement effort to effectively detect and arrest impaired drivers. As part of the regional campaign, state, county and local officers are cooperating by conducting at least one sobriety checkpoint every week until January 4, 2005.

According to Maryland Transportation Authority Police Chief Gary McIlhinney sobriety checkpoints save lives. Research has demonstrated that sobriety checkpoints can reduce alcohol-related fatalities by as much as 20 percent.
Statistics showing a nine percent increase in the number of people killed in impaired driving-related crashes in Maryland between 1998 and 2002 justifies Maryland using driver checkpoints. Even worse, deaths resulting from impaired-driver crashes accounted for roughly 30 percent of all traffic fatalities in Maryland in 2002.

Greenbelt city police have been participating in the state program. A sobriety checkpoint was conducted in the 6900 block of Greenbelt Road on July 2 and 3.

Tests Lack Content Vital for College

The graduation tests taken by a growing number of high school students predominantly measure math taught in most other countries in middle school and English that falls well below college admissions standards, according to the first in-depth analysis of the exams' content and rigor that was released on June 10.

Achieve, Inc., studied exit tests in six states that volunteered to allow the extensive, independent review – Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and Texas. The six states enroll roughly a quarter of all high school students in the United States and about half of the students who currently must pass a graduation exam.

The report finds that while states have moved over time to improve their graduation tests – which now cover some essential content in each subject – the tests cover only a fraction of the knowledge and skills deemed essential for post-secondary success by two and four-year colleges and by employers in high-growth, high-performance industries.

Erika Thomas Wins 2004 Skolnik Journalism Award

by Nicola Dickenson

The Skolnik award, a $100 savings bond that is awarded annually to an outstanding journalism or English student at Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS), commemorates the achievements and dedication of Dr. Alfred Skolnik, a volunteer at the Greenbelt News Review from 1959 until his death in 1977. Skolnik was also the unsalaried president at the paper. He firmly believed in freedom of the press and was involved in the 1966 case where a developer sued the paper. With support from the community and the News Review, Skolnik pursued the matter and the Supreme Court eventually found in favor of the paper.

That dedication, commitment and spirit of volunteerism is evident in this year's award recipient, 17-year-old Erika Thomas. She joined the ERHS paper in her junior year as a staff writer and soon found that she enjoyed layout much more than writing. She was named co-editor of the features section and was later promoted to editor-in-chief. Thomas, who plans to use the sav-

Thomas said the award was a surprise. "I was really dedicated to the paper," she said, "and I helped out on the other sections too."

Teacher Troy Bradbury, the paper's advisor for three years, said, "When I talked with the students about who should get the [Skolnik] award, they all agreed it should be Erika."

"If it wasn't for her work," he added, "there wouldn't have been a paper at school this year. It was on her shoulders to get the paper out."

Festival Parade Will Be Led by Two Popular Nonagenarians

Two Greenbelters, one 93 and the other 94, are being honored this week by a community in whose growth they have played a unique role. Jerry Goodin and Joseph “Pop” Cipriano, have given much over the years to a town they both love, a town that now – by making them the 1972 parade marshals for the Labor Day Festival – shows its affection for them.

Cipriano

Joseph “Pop” Cipriano, too, has given the town he loves some very special contributions; and the city has proclaimed him one of its favorite sons.

“Pop” Cipriano can truly be described as a Greenbelt pioneer. He came to the area in 1910 and bought 100 acres of land (which contains the house he still lives in). In his youth he had been a metal worker, a circus strongman and a farmer. He continued the farming, supplementing his income by becoming a supervisor for county roads. Single-handedly he made the mud-covered street that is now Greenbelt Rd. passable during the winter months by laying tree trunks on the road and covering them with packed dirt, gravel and cinders, raising the level of the road by three feet.

“Pop” was instrumental in obtaining funds for cutting the road which would connect Glenn Dale with Branchville, and performed much of the necessary work himself. The feat shortened the distance between Branchville and Glenn Dale from 17 to 6 miles. The road was opened in 1932 and was followed by a party for 500 people at Cipriano’s farm house.

Cipriano Rd. (formerly Telegraph Rd.) is of course named to honor his early achievements in road building.

Later “Pop” worked as a carpenter and maintenance worker for the city of Greenbelt, retiring at the age of 72 after an accident to his back.

“Pop” is familiar to most Greenbelters each Labor Day as he waves to the crowd from his flower-bedecked donkey cart. He has entered a float in each Labor Day parade for the past 18 years.

Living still on the family homestead on Greenbelt Rd., “Pop” is visited often by many of his five children, 19 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. He keeps busy by taking care of his house, doing his own grocery shopping, tending his tomato plants and reliving the highlights of his long life.

Goodin

Jerry Goodin came to Greenbelt 31 years ago when the town was the newly-created brain-child of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He was a laborer then, as he is now. The shopping area was all government-owned and Jerry was in charge of cleaning up the food store, theater, offices and beauty parlor, barber shop and service station. “Just about every week” he proudly proclaims, “I wore out a 32 oz. mop.”

He also takes a great deal of pride in remembering the names of the first managers he worked for, Walter Mott and Sam Ashelman.

Up until three years ago, Jerry drove to work from his home in North Brentwood, where his wife, Mamie, and one of his sons still live. But for the past three years he has maintained a room at the Center.

In recalling those days 30 years ago, Jerry doesn’t see too many changes in Greenbelt. He remembers how he helped measure off the land and drive in the stakes for what is now the Co-op Supermarket many years ago. “I’ve always enjoyed myself with the nice people in Greenbelt,” he affirms.

Jerry shakes his head in some bewilderment in recalling the city’s honoring him with a proclamation. “I couldn’t understand it,” he chuckles, “But good things comes to those that wait.”

The most important thing to Jerry Goodin, he says, and the reason for his awards is his motto: “Be kind to everyone especially little children.” Next in his thoughts are the servicemen, boys he knew as children growing up, playing around the Center, for whom he prays daily. “My main object everyday is to help someone,” he says.

Jerry attributes his long life to following the lessons of his father and mother. “Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings; and the years of thy life shall be many,” he quotes from Proverbs.

Jerry’s family consists of four daughters and three sons, more grandchildren than he can keep track of (somewhere around 20, he thinks) and five great-grandchildren. Most live nearby. But Jerry Goodin has a larger family – all the people of Greenbelt who have seen him over the years in his familiar necktie and long white apron, a cane or a broom in his hands. On humid summer days or bitter winter mornings, Jerry Goodin greets you with a warm and friendly “Hello.”

“I love Greenbelt,” Jerry proclaims. And Greenbelt loves Jerry Goodin.

Blood Supplies Sink People Urged to Give

Communities across the country are not collecting enough blood to meet hospital demands, paralyzing the American Red Cross national blood inventory system and resulting in the compromise of patient care in many area hospitals. This response from blood donors has plummeted to a record low and the demand for blood products is higher than ever before. The Greater Chesapeake and Potomac Blood Services Region, serving Maryland, Washington D.C., Northern Virginia and York and Adams County in Pennsylvania, reports that local inventory of blood products is not high enough to meet even one day’s worth of patient needs of certain blood types.

While all blood types are critically needed, donors with Type O negative blood (universal blood type) are urgently asked to schedule an appointment immediately as a result of this crisis. Appointments are available at all American Red Cross blood donor centers and community blood drives and can be obtained by calling 1-800-GIVE-LIFE. Apheresis appointments are available by calling 1-800-272-2123.

Who is eligible to give blood? Donors must be generally in good health; at least 17 years of age or in Maryland only, 16 with written parental consent; weigh no less than 110 pounds; have not received a tattoo within the past year; and have not donated whole blood within the past 56 days.

Center Merchants Call for Better Signage

On May 26 the Greenbelt City Council held a stakeholders meeting with representatives of the Roosevelt Center merchants to share mutual concerns. At the top of the list was the issue of security and the drinking of alcohol in the Center.

While those present acknowledged police response to their calls for assistance, they urged that such response be quicker and that enforcement be strengthened.

Barbara Simon, speaking on behalf of the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts and Greenbelt Access Television (GAVA/GATE), urged council to remember about getting appropriate equipment to be able to show various types of media at the theater. Now that the city has taken ownership of the theater, its use for purposes other than movies becomes possible. Simon particularly urged purchases of a projector to show videos such as those produced by GAVA.

Merchants and council members also discussed possibilities for additional signage to promote center events as well as guidelines concerning signage on city property for public events. Michael McMullin, speaking for the New Deal Café, urged more and bigger signs or other means to attract patrons to Roosevelt Center.

Besides all five members of the Greenbelt City Council, City Manager Michael McLaughlin and Community Planner Kristen Ward represented the city at the meeting.

Others attending were Dorrie Bates and Bob Davis from the Greenbelt Co-op, Ellen Siegel and McMullin of the New Deal Café, Cindy Comproni of the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union, Simon of GAVA/GATE, Gwen Vaccaro of Pleasant Touch and Sheldon Goldberg and Eileen Peterson.
